Part 1: Situational Writing (15 marks)

1 The pictures below show a conversation three pupils had at the school canteen after recess. Study the pictures carefully.

Your Task

Imagine you are Lily.

Write an email to your discipline master, Mr Harif, telling him about the suggestions on how to encourage pupils to clear the tables after eating.

You are to refer to the pictures and information on page 2 for your email.

In your email, include the following key information:

- · what was observed at the canteen
- · what were the two suggestions
- what was finally agreed upon and why
- how the pupils can be paired up

You may reorder the points. Remember to write in complete sentences.

Write a composition of at least 150 words about developing a good habit.

The pictures are provided to help you think about this topic.

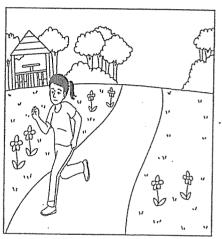

Your composition should be based on one or more of these pictures.

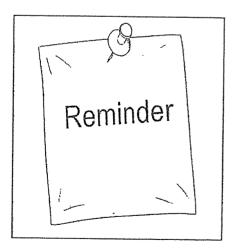

Consider the following points when you plan your composition:

- What was the good habit?
- Why was the good habit developed?

You may use the points in any order and include other relevant points as well.

Jennie stepped into the bustling hawker centre, the savoury aromas instantly tickling her senses. She was amazed by the vibrant energy that filled the place. She walked past rows of food stalls, each enticing her with its mouthwatering dishes.

Jennie decided to join a stall with the longest queue for she knew that when it comes to hawker cuisine, the queue is the best testament to the quality of food at the stall. Savvy (17)diners like her knew that if they wanted the signature dish that the stalls offered, they (18)had to endure the wait.

While queuing, she noticed a group of seniors chatting and sipping hot drinks from their saucers - an old and ingenious way to cool down their piping hot beverages.

Finally, it was her turn. She ordered a plate of fried char kway teow and watched the stall owner work his magic. He skilfully tossed the flat rice noodles and other ingredients into (20)the sizzling wok, infusing them with sauces and seasonings. Jennie could not wait to devour the aromatic and flavourful dish.

PERANAKAN MUSEUM REOPENS!

CHILDREN'S DISCOVERY TRAIL WEEKEND FUN 2 and 3 December 2023

Having been closed for renovation for 2 years, we are celebrating the reopening of the museum with a special discovery trail for children.

WHO ARE THE PERANAKANS?

In Singapore, the term "Peranakan" generally refers to a person of mixed Chinese and Malay or Indonesian heritage. Many Singapore Peranakans trace their origins to 15th century Malacca where their ancestors were thought to be Chinese traders who married local women. These Chinese traders settled and raised families in the bustling ports of Malacca, Penang and Singapore – which under British rule were known as the Straits Settlements. The Peranakans were also known as the "Straits-born Chinese". The Peranakan men and women were referred to as 'Baba' and 'Nyonya' respectively.

Over time, the Chinese traders adopted the local lifestyle but retained their Chinese beliefs. This resulted in the Peranakans developing their own culture and practices as well as a variation of the Malay language, Baba Malay.

Food and Feasting

One outstanding feature of Peranakan culture is the cuisine, which is also known as Nyonya food, named after the ladies who cook it. Bursting with flavors and colors, their food is known for its mix of Chinese ingredients with Malay herbs and spices as well as cooking methods of both. The mix of cooking techniques and spices resulted in the exceptional tangy and spicy flavours present in Peranakan cuisine.

Traditional Arts and Culture

Embroidery and beadwork are two intricate forms of Peranakan needlework. In the past, young Peranakan girls were required to master these skills and be meticulous with their nimble fingers. These skills showcase their patience, attention to detail and endurance. It involves sewing beautiful miniature beads of different colours to footwear to create dainty slippers called kasut manek. The same craft is used to embellish the nyonya kebaya, a traditional Peranakan dress, as well as household items.

Children's Discovery Trail - What Can You Expect?

Come early and be one of the first 200 children to receive a Peranakan culture-themed balloon*.

What's more? Receive a goody bag containing an activity book and a map. Pick it up at the entrance of the museum. Follow the map and collect stamps after completing the activity at each station. There are 10 stations scattered around the various galleries. Collect all 10 stamps to redeem a limited-edition plush toy* from the Peranakan Museum!

*While supplies last.

Trail Highlights

Station 1: Peranakan Dress-Up

The traditional costume for Peranakan women, nyonya kebaya, was adapted from local Malay traditional dresses. Have fun dressing up as a little Baba or Nyonya and strike a pose at the photo booth for $2.

Station 5: Congkak

Congkak, derived from a Malay word, is a traditional game played across Southeast Asia and popular among the Malays and the Peranakans. Congkak means mental calculation which is essential for the game. Play the game with a friend and the winner is the one who collects the most marbles!

Station 2: Miniature Snack-Making

Nyonya snacks are an essential part of Peranakan cuisine. Have fun making mini models of Peranakan snacks using clay and learn more about Peranakan food culture. You will see on display the different traditional utensils used to make these snacks.

Bring home your own mini model and also pop by the museum café for some delicious traditional snacks!

Station 8: Beadwork

Do you know that in the past, Nyonyas had to learn to bead their own shoes before getting married? Try your hand at beading – a tradition which involves using colourful beads to create detailed patterns.

For each question from 21 to 28, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4) and shade your answer on the Optical Answer Sheet, (8 marks)

Please note that the passage for Comprehension questions 71 to 80 in Booklet B is on the next page. You may now go on to Booklet B.

The year my mother was diagnosed with cancer, my father sent me to live with my neighbour Aunty Loh. He said he could not drive his taxi, ferry my mother to the hospital and take care of me. I was reluctant to do so and would have protested, if not for the fact that I had noticed that the bald patch on the back of my mother's head, at first a circle no bigger than a 50-cent coin, was now an uneven patch the size of my fist.

5

Aunty Loh welcomed my father and me at the door. Aunty Loh had short grey curls and wide-set eyes that blinked rapidly behind her large glasses. Even though she was short and thin, she walked with a heavy foot due to arthritis, each step taken as if she was ascending a hill. Photographs of the Loh's daughter lined a shelf and, next to it, was an elaborate-looking sewing machine clad in black and brass plating. I spun the wheel and watched the needle bounce up and down like a finger tapping to music. "Junyi! Don't touch Aunty Loh's things," my father's voice boomed. I jerked and hid my hand behind my back. "Never mind," she said, turning to me. "Don't worry, Ah Boy. Do what you like. Treat this place as your home."

10

Every day after school, I would do my homework in the living room while Aunty Loh worked on the sewing machine, next to a bulging red plastic bag overflowing with her customers' garments. Aunty Loh chatted a lot when she sewed. I learnt she missed her daughter, Pei Fen, and wished she would visit more often. Pei Fen had married recently and moved out. While Aunty Loh never explicitly said so, I could tell they did not have a good relationship. Twice a month, Pei Fen would come over for dinner and stay no longer than an hour. She spoke to her mother in a dismissive manner, often deriding her for being longwinded and bothersome.

15

A few months later, Aunty Loh announced, "Baby!" after putting down the phone with Pei Fen. Pei Fen then began coming over weekly. Pregnancy seemed to mellow her out. There was laughter during dinner and Pei Fen would listen intently as Aunty Loh shared her pregnancy experiences and stories. Pei Fen would leave each time with a thermos filled with herbal soup.

20

"Ah Boy, come help me. It's spoilt again." Aunty Loh had set a pot of soup on the stove and turned the stove knob repeatedly - click-click - but there was no fire. I trooped across the kitchen and, with a quick twist of the knob, the bright blue flame shot out. The old stove had been faulty recently. Somehow, though, I was always able to turn it on. "Magic fingers," I declared to Aunty Loh, who waved her metal spoon like a wand in the air and laughed. However, the magic did not work later that week.

25

That morning, Aunty Loh was preparing soup in the kitchen. "Ah Boy," Aunty Loh called out. "Can help me? It's spoilt again." I was running late for school but I slipped my shoes off and ran to the kitchen. Aunty Loh was rapping the side of the gas stove, trying to get it to work. I moved and turned the knob. Click-clickclick. No fire. Click-click-click. I tried again, but nothing changed. "I think it's really spoilt this time. I have to go to school already." Waving to Aunty Loh even though she was not looking, I said, "I will try again when I get home, okay?"

30

When I returned from school that afternoon, a small crowd had gathered outside Aunty Loh's house. I was surprised to see my father in the crowd. A burnt smell filled the air. I noticed that Aunty Loh's doorway had been cordoned off by yellow tape. "Where's Aunty Loh? Is she okay?" I asked my father as a strange tingle crawled up my neck.

35

"A fire broke out!" my father said, pointing to the charred walls. "A fire? How?"

40

"I'm not sure, but I heard from the neighbour that her stove exploded."

"Exploded?" I echoed. "Is she okay?" I asked again. "They said that when the firemen rescued her, her clothes were all black." I nodded numbly. All I could think of was how Aunty Loh's skin must have blistered under the heat of the fire. I never saw Aunty Loh again. Her house needed extensive repair, so she moved to Pei Fen's house.

45

My mother, by then, had won the battle with cancer and was in remission. As she sat at the edge of my bed, sewing a button on my trousers, I caught sight of a ball of hair that had landed on her collarbone, similar to the one she first shed while undergoing treatment - and my heart faltered. With bated breath, I inched closer to take a second look, only to realise it was simply a clump of black thread.
